© Copyright 2008. ISIS Paranormal Investigations

(July, 2008) July 6, 2008 will be the first month that ISIS Paranormal Investigations, a paranormal investigation group from Upstate New York, will host a new weekly, hour long radio show: ISIS Paranormal Radio! Every Sunday evening at 6 PM, the cofounders and co-directors of ISIS Paranormal Investigations will explore a range of topics including the paranormal, the unexplained, the esoteric, Wicca, magick, hauntings, ghosts, spirits, and more! The show will air on Blogtalkradio.com (www.blogtalkradio.com/isisparanormal), and will feature fantastic guests and exciting topics!

The show's new tagline is: "Break free from the fear; pierce the darkened veil of mystery." The show's tagline was purposefully selected because it makes a clear statement about the show's intent; the ISIS Paranormal Radio Show has been established in order to inform listeners about topics

New Case File Released!

(March 16, 2008), The ISIS Paranormal Investigations team had an opportunity to conduct an investigation in Norwood, Massachusetts. We were contacted by a male, who will here in be known as Michael to protect his identity. Michael contacted us with concerns about the strange noises he and his family were hearing in their Norwood home, and other peculiar, unexplained events that were affecting both his family and his marriage. The family reported a number of paranormal claims including the fact that they could hear people walking around and moving about in the upstairs attic when there was no one in the attic at the time.

"Michael has a weight room upstairs...I can hear the weights moving. At first I thought it was Michael actually lifting weights and I wondered why he would be lifting weights at 9 o'clock at night. When I finally got our daughter to bed, I would get up, close the bedroom door, and find Michael had been sitting across the hallway the whole time."

In addition, one witness to the paranormal activity in the home claimed to hear a harmonica being played in the kitchen when there was no one in the kitchen; and Michael's wife Amanda saw an apparition of a man in the home: the man looked to be Caucasian, he was in the shadows and related to an extraordinarily controversial form of study: the paranormal field.

The paranormal field has been drawing the attention of more and more people around the world, and such attention has also increased the demand for a willingness to openly discuss paranormal topics and issues without the fear of criticism, censure, or disapproval. The aim of the show is to reveal that which is not fully understood by all in regard to paranormal/pagan topics; to explore both paranormal and pagan issues that demand immediate attention and heightened awareness; to encourage open-mindedness when viewing both paranormal and pagan topics, to entertain, to educate, to inspire, and to inform.

Thanks to the services of Blogtalkradio.com, all of the ISIS Paranormal Radio shows will be archived after the shows air live on Sunday evenings. Listeners can visit dressed all in black. Michael complained of, among other paranormal claims, experiencing negative thoughts – thoughts he believed were not necessarily his own, and he explained that when he left the home he felt normal once more.

The most concerning paranormal reports offered by the couple relate to their two year old child. The child repeatedly advised that she saw “Darth Vader” in the hallway of the home, and she often talked about “bad people” in the house. Often times the child would say: “Oh oh mommy and daddy the bad people are coming,” or “Oh oh mommy and daddy the bad people are here.” The parents assert that they do not use terms like “the bad people,” so they are not sure where the child picked up the expression. The child’s fear had grown so intense that the child would frequently refuse to sleep in her own bed, and insisted on sleeping with the parents.

Whenever Michael used the rosary it seemed to create a stir; on one occasion, Michael was putting his daughter to bed and decided to recite the rosary to keep her calm. He began to speak the rosary aloud when the child told him to stop: “You’re making the people mad.” Michael questioned the child: “What people?” The child again referred to the “bad people” and told him that “we have to leave, it’s not safe.”

Amanda believes that the child may have psychic abilities and reports that the child has been “particularly empathetic since birth.” Amanda advised our team that there have been occasions where people have stopped her in public while shopping or running errands, and have advised her that the child is special. She has been advised that the child was a “crystal child.” The child has not yet been officially tested for psychic abilities and was not present during our investigation.

ISIS Paranormal Radio's Guests of the Month Bios:

This month's guest of the month is none other than Michael Baker, one of the founders of New Gravity Media. Michael Baker and his partner Anthony Z. Monti, formed New Gravity Media, an "independent film and media production company that creates and distributes theatrical, documentary, commercial, and independent motion pictures and special interest projects." New Gravity Media's first production 14 Degrees: A Paranormal Documentary has met with astounding success; the incredibly detailed documentary pertaining to the history of ghost hunting has sold in 16 countries and every state in the United States.

Baker was born in 1970 in Boston, Massachusetts and his interest in the field of entertainment rapidly developed during his teen years. At 15 years of age, Baker was part of a local group of musicians: a rock group that began to study and practice together. In a little over a decade's time, Baker had become well known in the local music scene as a adept and skilled musician and instrument technician; Baker has repaired instruments for the likes of Eric Clapton and Billy Joel in the past. Baker's work continued on in the entertainment field and in the past he has actively worked as a disc jockey as well as in various aspects of video production. Introduction to the Tarot by Angela Kaufman

The Tarot intrigues students of various spiritual traditions. Its origins have been veiled in rumor and speculation to the extent that it becomes difficult to discern fact from false advertisement when one searches for the source of this tool. This article will attempt to clarify misinformation as well as give the reader a comprehensive understanding of the Tarot and its many uses. The first part of this article will explain the origins and evolution of Tarot; the second part will provide an in depth look into meanings and techniques for using the Tarot for divination and personal development.

History

Attempting to trace the origins of the Tarot has often been a cumbersome task. Many occultists are familiar with the stories of the Tarot originating in Egypt and being associated with antiquity. One reason for this assumption is the belief that the Tarot was a common tool of the gypsies who were falsely believed to be of Egyptian descent (<http://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/Tarot>). Others supposed that because Egyptians were among the first to produce paper that it was likely that this paper was eventually fashioned into early Tarot cards (Place). Further research by objective scholars however has proven that this would not have been historically accurate. Papyrus, they reason, was not a suitable media for the making of cards, as it takes the form of a larger scroll and would be impractical for use in a card game or a divination tool. It is further pointed out that games of chance and primitive forms of gambling were often the product of this ancient technology, as well as the development of early forms of currency (Place). The popular tie between Ancient Egypt and the Tarot is currently being attributed to Occultists in the 1700s that for a number of reasons made several assumptions linking the Tarot to this culture.
